Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Monday 01 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cold with some snow in north, milder in south.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud and patchy snow across some northern areas. Heavier rain, soon into the southwest, moving northeastwards, turning to snow across parts of northern England, southern Scotland and perhaps Northern Ireland. Far north clearer with wintry showers, drier in SW later.

Tuesday:
Heavy snow affecting parts of northern England and southern Scotland, mostly turning to rain in northern England. Brighter and very mild further south, heavy showers later. Wintry showers far north.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Persistent and heavy snow developing across parts of northern Scotland. Further rain, locally heavy for northern England/southern Scotland. Sunshine and showers elsewhere. Cold in the north, milder elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.